Overview

As legal counsel to many national real estate developers and Fortune 500 businesses with sites and facilities in Rhode Island, Rob knows real estate, land use, government affairs and municipal law inside and out. That in-depth knowledge from over 35 years of experience, helps him find fast, practical solutions and efficient strategies for our clients in regulatory matters, transactions and disputes. He has represented developers of transportation hubs, port facilities, power plants, hospitals and MOB's, hotels, housing, retail centers and industrial parks.

He guided the State of Rhode Island's acquisition of former Navy bases at Quonset and Davisville and has shepherded numerous projects for national and local clients through regulatory and governmental agencies, from local zoning boards to federal bureaucracies—processes that required extensive legal knowledge, common sense, diplomacy and trust.

Experience

- Rob has enjoyed a wide range of real estate experiences, including the permitting and implementation of the state's first large methane gas burning electric power plant. Representing the developer, Rob successfully secured the permits, easements and utility agreements necessary for the collection of the state landfill's methane gas in conformance with Clean Air Act standards and local land use requirements.
- He drafted and negotiated tax incentive documentation between the State of Rhode Island and such companies as CVS, Bank of America, IGT, Amgen and Electric Boat.
- Rob has provided sellers, buyers, landlords and tenants advice of transaction structures and negotiated transaction documents on Rhode Island's largest and most sophisticated deals, recently concluding residential transactions exceeding $12 million each, commercial transactions in excess of $100 million each and larger portfolio transactions.
- Rob has obtained entitlements for McDonald's Corporation in their expansion and renovation of facilities in Rhode Island.
- In obtaining permits for all of Toll Brothers, Inc.'s Rhode Island projects, he was able to coordinate and mitigate the concerns of neighbors, town planners, investors, buyers and lawyers to avoid delay and appeal. Rob also drafted the operating documents for many condominium associations and alternative home owners associations.
- Rob quarterbacked the comprehensive rezoning and sale of an historic mill building located on a major commercial and recreational harbor to allow for mixed use development. This project required the approval of many local, state and federal regulators.
